

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections.

Indiana's law has improved our time at home by eliminating incessant calls from solicitors during mealtimes.

Before the implementation of Indiana's Telephone Privacy law we would receive up to 20 phone solicitations a week. After the law took effect we don't receive any unwanted calls.

My wife and I deem the Indiana Privacy Law very important, and do not want the FCC to water it down with any exemptions to its coverage.
